

High Quality Printing with Habasit Blankets

For decades now, Habasit has been the world's number one manufacturer of printing blankets. This outstanding position has its reasons. Printing blankets by Habasit have a higher resistance to chemicals, a higher temperature resistance, are easy to join and install. And they are available all over the world. Anytime.

But that is but a small share of the advantages that make Habasit's printing blankets the best in the world. In 1989, when Fernand Habegger, founder of Habasit, decided to produce printing blankets that were wider than all existing blankets up to that time, he did not respond to the market. He formed it. This has been the spirit of Habasit ever since. They create and innovate for the future of our clients. This agility and courage have positioned Habasit at the very top when it comes to belting. Printing blankets are but three of over 600 outstanding products manufactured, trialled, tested, innovated and constantly improved.

Three types of printing blankets are produced at Habasit today. They are used all over the world for flat screen, rotary and ink-jet machines as well as for printing tables. Two of them, ENU-20EXBD and ENU-20ELBD have a Polyester (PET) traction layer, and ENU-50AXBD, most recent member of the family, has an Aramid traction layer for even higher performance and a lower noise level. All of them follow Habasit's most rewarding maxims: they set the worldwide standard for quality, ease of installation and the highest printing accuracy and reliability.

And there is even more: Habasit's printing blankets have the highest chemical resistance, which prevents damage of the surface, makes them easy to clean and enhances their service life. They have a very low deviation of the neutral layer, which guarantees the most uniform printing accuracy. They resist to higher temperature, which slows down the aging of the TPU surface and again adds to the service life. They are quick and easy to join and install, which reduces downtime and your costs to a mere minimum. They are available all over the world. So, if you require a supreme printing blanket in the remotest part of the world, there may be one stored within a day's journey from your production site. No wonder Habasit's printing blankets dominate the world's market.

The supreme quality and reliability of their printing blankets is one side of Habasit's gold medal. We are in today's position for the success our customers have gained using our blankets. Because we are aware of this, our customers have always come first. For over 60 years now we have listened to our customers' wishes and needs.
